

I stand with Ukraine

No matter how distant or unknown, it's a highlight for humanity – today is the people of Ukraine, tomorrow it could be any other, anywhere, at any other level.

When I reflect of it happening to any other, at any other level, I refer not only to countries. I do also mean wider or smaller regions, but even at personal, neighbouring, housing or farming levels. What would you do if, one given day, your neighbour decides to invade you, destroy your land and kill your people, for unprovoked reasons?

Then some orthodox will say, it's not unprovoked, it happened because of this and that. Well, 'this and that' is not whatsoever comparable to what is happening to Ukraine. If 'this and that' refers to political or economic reasons, or any other under a common order but different to 'invading, destroying and killing', then fight for your arguments at that same stage, with harmonious and determined character, persuasion and intelligence, but do not use it as an excuse to invade, destroy and kill. Doing this, it's not only nonsense and insane, but a clear sign of weakness and cowardice – not the opposite.

So I do stand with Ukraine because, from my understanding of its situation and a simple read of history, I do not perceive any reasoning for what they are suffering from last 24th of February, other than the savagery and madness side of humans, the darkest side for those in power (the power of holding a position or an asset capable to harm others) who believe themselves as with the right to follow their will, just like that.

I do stand with Ukraine because, their invasion, destruction and killing is completely unfair, inhuman and sick.

What is happening to Ukraine is an indication of failure for humanity. The power, strength & richness from some, must bring harmony and happiness for others, not harm and sadness. What they suffer now is deeply dark, it's an anti-human behaviour. We, humans, are a privileged species whose intelligence ought to be able to resolve conflicts in sanity, moderation and peace, not just eliminating those who oppose to our thinking.

I do also believe that Ukraine's situation is clearly an indication of mankind declining by destroying our planet, as a whole. What happens at human level, reflects to what is happening to our planet. Our planet is so sick, that the heartless suffering of Ukraine is a mirror of our human capability to disrespect all in every way. Humanity is also very sick.

My voice is a solitary voice, I understand that. And it might not get any reading nor attention, that's fine. Nevertheless, I decided not to be silent and bring this small reflection public, hoping for at least one person to receive it and raise a positive awareness, anywhere, also to unite my voice to others who stand with Ukraine in their right to live in peace, autonomy and freedom – simple rights and human values we all must defend.

And as one little girl from Ireland said it recently, 'get better soon, Ukraine'.
